President Comments On Faculty Reductions--Because of current and projected enrollment decreases, the Minnesota State College Board decided Tuesday (Nov. 28) that when the 1973 school year begins there will be 167 fewer faculty positions at the six non-metropolitan state colleges. The greatest reductions must be made at Mankato and Southwest, where enrollment has declined more sharply than elsewhere in the system. When asked by the news media to comment on the faculty reductions, President Graham made this statement: "Because St. Cloud State College anticipated an enrollment decrease this fall, some allocated faculty positions were not filled. Therefore, it will not be necessary for us to eliminate any faculty positions this academic year. We are currently evaluating the need for faculty positions in all areas of the college for the 1973-74 academic year and beyond. For next year we probably will reduce total faculty positions on the basis of an anticipated enrollment decrease of approximately five per cent. This means that by next fall we will have fewer faculty positions than we have now. However, some of this reduction will be accomplished through resignations, retirements and reassignments."

Hopwood, Knutson Report Findings--Alfred Hopwood and Keith Knutson, both in biology, gave testimony last Thursday (Nov. 30) during a public hearing before the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency in St. Paul. Testimony was based on Hopwood's and Knutson's findings following two to four years of research on the Mississippi River near Monticello. The hearing concerned the establishment of WPC 35, a set of standards for the control of thermal effluents into Minnesota waters. Studies by the two biologists indicate that discharges from the Northern States Power Co. plant at Monticello have had a negligible effect on the algae and fish in the river.

Highlights of State College Board Meeting

The Chancellor's Office has provided a summary of the State College Board meeting November 28 at Mankato State College. These are the highlights:

Budgeting--The Board approved a revised biennial budget request for the six state colleges (Minnesota Metro excluded) which: (1) assumes that FTE enrollment will level off at 32,000 per year during the 1973-75 biennium. An earlier budget request approved in September assumed a 35,000 FTE count. However, fall quarter enrollments this year dropped to 33,600, indicating the need for a downward revision. (2) reduces total anticipated expenditures from $123.1 million to $117.8 million. (3) reduces estimated receipts (tuition) from $31.8 million to $30.6 million. (4) reduces the requested appropriation from $91.3 million to $87.1 million. (5) does not include faculty and civil service salaries still under negotiation. (6) includes tuition at the present level (27 per cent of instructional costs). (7) calls for 167 fewer faculty positions and 50 fewer clerical/technical positions beginning with the 1973-74 academic year. This action means that the six state colleges will begin the next academic year--if enrollment projections are accurate (32,000 FTE)--with the 19-to-1 faculty-student ratio mandated by the Legislature.

Resolutions--The Board passed a resolution reaffirming its position that there should be no increase in tuition and requesting the Higher Education Coordinating Commission to examine the feasibility of reducing tuition for state colleges to encourage enrollments. Another Board resolution expresses concern for personal hardships involved in adjusting to lower enrollments and directs the Chancellor to explore new methods of staffing with the Governor and the Legislature.

Appeals--The Board denied appeals for hearings from three untenured faculty whose contracts were not renewed: Alex Stach, St. Cloud, and Daljit Singh and Thomas Linscheid, Bemidji. The Board ruled that adequate hearing processes were available and procedures had been properly followed.

Miscellaneous--An interim constitution for Minnesota Metro was approved... Robert Cobb, Mankato, reported that the Human Rights Commission had interviewed several candidates for Executive Director and will announce the appointment as soon as clearance is received. No new positions can be filled in state government under the Governor's freeze order without approval from a committee designated by the Governor...Vice Chancellor Ray Calhoun made a status report on the Student Housing Task Force...Inter-Faculty Policies Committee President Rod Henry, Winona, reported that Minnesota Metro faculty have joined the Inter-Faculty Organization. He also presented a statement from IFPC on the practical application of tenure, which IFPC wants considered in faculty contract negotiations...President Jan Nelson, Minnesota State College Student Association, reported student confusion about staffing reductions and the biennial budget request. He also presented an MSCSA resolution concerning a Student Legal Service, which was referred to the Rules and Appeals Committee...The Board was informed that Southwest had received a Kellogg Foundation Grant to establish a model regional services program...The Board accepted a report from its Educational Policies Committee which included approval of new academic programs.

Here is a summary of President Graham's remarks to the faculty December 8 regarding the anticipated enrollment decline and faculty reductions in 1973-74:

The enrollment decline in four-year colleges and universities is general throughout the United States...One factor involved is the growing popularity of junior colleges, community colleges, vocational-technical institutes and proprietary schools...Another factor is the "stop-out" phenomenon, with groups of young people turning away from post-secondary education of any kind...And the threat of selective service no longer hangs over the heads of young men, also affecting college enrollments...Toward the end of the decade the changing birth rate picture will affect college enrollments...

The financing of higher education is also changing. We have been on a steadily ascending scale of financing for nearly 20 years. We not only have enjoyed increasing dollars as the economy has prospered, but also an increasing percentage of the budgets of state and federal governments. That clearly is not likely to continue...In Minnesota, the Governor has announced no tax increase. That means...higher education will have increasing competition to maintain its share of (tax) dollars. Most of you are familiar with the financing of higher education in Minnesota and the formulas under which we operate...When our enrollment is reported in the fall, we must immediately reduce our operating budget for the remainder of the year. If we must give dollars back to the Department of Administration, these dollars must come from whatever funds are available. It is primarily at this problem that the State College Board, Chancellor's Office and Presidents are directing their attention for the next biennial budget. With the assistance of faculty groups and student groups, we will be attempting to get some improvement, some "breathing time" in the way the formula operates.

Last Friday the Chancellor and the Presidents presented a (1973-75) budget which would give us a little more flexibility in adjusting to lowered enrollments, essentially allowing us to fund in the second year of the biennium at the same level that we were allowed to fund in the first year of the biennium, regardless of enrollment changes. The efforts of the State College System will be devoted to getting some amelioration in the way the funding and staffing patterns work in the state colleges.

In the budget the Board has adopted, I was able to include five special programs requesting funding above and beyond the formula. A couple of these are programs already being funded on a special basis--Special Education and the Laboratory School. In addition, we have asked for special funding for the Physicians Assistants program, for the Center for Academic Change, and a rather large budget for an extended and expanded community service and off-campus program, which would create a number of faculty positions. The dollar request is in excess of $200,000 for each year of the biennium. If this is funded, many of our staffing problems will be eased...

In the current biennium, St. Cloud's enrollment has declined less than at any other Minnesota state college. Because of this fact plus some very good planning during the past two years, it was not necessary to reduce any faculty positions this year. There are a number of factors operating in our favor. Our location is one. Not only our central location in the state but our location near the Twin Cities... One of the enrollment projections done at the University of Minnesota in 1970 suggested that by 1985 St. Cloud would be the largest of the state colleges even though it would be somewhat smaller than it is now. Another factor operating in our favor is our reputation for quality programs. We have been able to achieve an improvement in our student attrition rate. While our freshman enrollment has been declining rather sharply, our attrition rate--that is, the number of students we lose between the freshman and sophomore year--is also declining. Five years ago we were losing more than half the freshmen between the beginning of their freshman year and the beginning of the sophomore year. Last year that figure was down to about 30 per cent and hopefully it will be even lower this year. The attrition rate is still too high and I hope we will be able to improve it further in the future. We must give some credit to those who have worked so hard to spread the word about St. Cloud to prospective students. This includes High School-Junior College Relations, Information Services, faculty groups who have looked at the problems of transfer students, the Bookstore Fund Committee, which has made scholarship funds available, and the publications office ...All of these efforts, which we will continue to improve and accelerate, have had an impact.

Some factors are going to be negative for St. Cloud. I am concerned about our general education program and about the opening of a new junior college at Cambridge. The junior college decision was made some time ago and is now under review by the Higher Education Coordinating Commission. I have offered the services of St. Cloud State College to provide educational programs in the Cambridge area if a decision is made not to proceed with the building of that junior college.

It is difficult to be precise about our enrollment for next year or the year following. An enrollment decline of approximately 5 per cent is the only kind of realistic plan that we could adopt. This was the estimate of Institutional Research and the Faculty Allocation Review Board....We hope that our increasing number of transfer students continues to increase. We had more transfer students last year than ever before. We were the only state college to enjoy an increase in the number of transfer students. We must look at transfer students to help make up the deficiency in freshman enrollment. Our freshman applications are up slightly but the numbers are so small and it is so early that it is very difficult to reach any conclusion. The American College Testing Office indicates that the number of next year's freshmen listing St. Cloud as their choice of college has declined.

...Prior to last year, faculty committees and faculty representatives have not been involved in the allocation of faculty positions. Last year, in looking at the new State College Board Rules and looking ahead to the kinds of problems that seemed inevitable even then, it was not only desirable but essential that there be faculty participation in the problems of resource allocation. Consequently, the election by the Faculty Senate of representatives to the Faculty Allocation Committee last year and the Faculty Allocation Review Board this year are indications of faculty participation...The faculty allocation proposal with its various cluster formulas that has been presented is a proposal deserving serious attention. The committee is to be commended for the effort it has made.

I have read a lot of literature on the problems of allocating faculty positions among departments. I have been engaged in the process myself as a dean. There is no perfect way. There is no simple formula. There is no easy way to solve the complexities of this problem in order to recognize differences among departments and to preserve the quality of programs. The approach taken by FARB is realistic. It is one which does recognize differences. It appears to be a fair approach. Every department has a right to argue about its placement in the cluster and the recommendation for its own allocation. The committee will listen to these and reconsider its proposal and look very carefully at what we do at each step of the way in this very painful and difficult process of faculty reduction. Termination notices which may be given are not irrevocable. They can be revoked down to the last minute... Members of the committee, myself, and all of us who are in any way responsible in this area cannot help but grieve at the kinds of decisions that have to be made.

I want to point out that administrative and service positions have been cut as well as teaching faculty. There were approximately four positions in that category reduced last year and the proposal calls for a reduction of 6 out of 17 for next year, which is more than a third--certainly more than the proportion that administrative and service positions occupy in the total institution.

This college will do everything it can to aid those individuals who are not retained. In addition to this personal kind of hardship, the hardships on the departments cannot be ignored. Some of the courses we have offered in the past we cannot offer in the future. At the same time, looking at most of our departments, which are large, strong, with many talented people, I cannot believe that reductions of the limited scope we are talking about are crippling...

We are concerned with faculty and student morale. This is where there is great danger to the institution. If we freely predict that the loss of these positions will result in a reduction of quality, the inevitable result will be a further drop in enrollment and further reductions in faculty. If we send our students home for Christmas vacation convinced that this institution is drowned in bitterness and tears over this problem, that the institution is falling apart with recriminations among departments, that the quality of the institution is on the decline, I don't think there is much difficulty in predicting what kind of result will ensue...

We can have some positive reactions. I hope that we will continue to work on our general education program. I hope we will continue work on new programs which promise to be attractive to significant numbers of students, both on and off campus. Our enrollment drop and the result--faculty reduction--would have been much more serious if it were not for an increase in off-campus offerings, particularly at the graduate level, this fall. The on-campus enrollment decline this fall was 5.9 per cent. We were able to reduce that decline to 3.6 per cent only because of the increase in off-campus and graduate work. Extra efforts need to be made. We need to offer more night classes. Dr. Howard Russell has indicated the possibilities to several departments. Several members of the administration have already offered their services in teaching classes. Many people are willing to take on extra duties. This kind of thing has happened at other colleges and is helping solve the problem of generating extra credit hours.

While some of our sister colleges have not reacted as well as they might to their problems, in some cases they have done very well. Over the Christmas holidays, for example, Mankato students will go back to their home communities to help recruit other students with some special literature after having gone through a briefing session. At Moorhead, faculty and students have banded together in a new program called "Dollars for Scholars" through which they hope to raise $100,000 in scholarships to attract students, including more than $25,000 from the faculty. We have always had these kinds of extra efforts on this campus, but we need to do more. They can help us at least ameliorate our problems. A survey of the possibilities of attracting more students will be undertaken by a committee already in existence. It is called the Prospective Student Relations or High School-Junior College Relations Committee, chaired by Vice President Montgomery. The Faculty Senate and Student Senate will be asked to elect members to it and we will ask for faculty cooperation in providing this committee with new ideas.

I am not pessimistic about the future of St. Cloud State College. I am concerned about faculty reductions, but I am convinced that the heritage of excellence at St. Cloud will not lapse. We must not only convince ourselves of that but continue to maintain that reputation in Minnesota. Because Minnesota has come to count on it and our future student body is looking forward to it.

Views from the Press--Several Minnesota newspapers have carried editorials in recent weeks concerning faculty reductions in the Minnesota state colleges. The two reprinted here are representative...

Rochester Post Bulletin December 12, 1972

State Colleges Must Face Up to Need for Cutbacks Now

There is understandably a good deal of weeping and gnashing of teeth going on within the walls of Minnesota's state colleges these days following the recent announcement that 167 faculty positions will have to be cut in the next biennium as a result of declining enrollments.

The outcry has been particularly strong at the largest of the colleges in the system--Mankato State--where the number of full-time students dropped by 6½ per cent this year to a total of 10,295, and another 11 per cent decline is forecast for next fall. Since the State Legislature allots one faculty position for every 19 full-time undergraduate students, Mankato State has been told it must lop 78 members from its teaching corps of 632 in the next year or so.

Mankato State has rather feverishly been seeking ways to avoid or reduce the prospective cuts. Faculty members have launched a "take-a-legislator-to-lunch" program in hopes of getting lawmakers to change the faculty-student formula; vigorous recruiting efforts have been undertaken by both the staff and student body to attract prospective students now in high school; and professors have been going out to southern Minnesota communities to preach a "broader campus" concept under which the expertise of faculty members could be utilized to help in such fields as local government problems, pollution-control, community theater, drug abuse, and senior citizen programs. Meanwhile, administrators have been proceeding with plans for the state-mandated cutback, and preliminary proposals have led to a good deal of faculty in-fighting over which departments should take the brunt of the blow, if it comes.

It takes no great sense of compassion to sympathize with Mankato and the other state colleges in this dilemma, because in the end the problem becomes a very human one: A large number of recently hired professors, the majority of whom have earned doctorates and have young families to support but who have not yet attained tenure status, will be out of jobs in the face of a very tight market for their skills.

At the same time, however, we do not think it is callous to suggest that higher education should not enjoy any special shield from the realities of the market place and that Minnesota taxpayers who contributed so generously to the expansion of educational facilities in the 1960's should not be expected to continue to do so when there is a clear decline in demand. The handwriting has been on the wall for several years now that the era of uncritical spending for higher education programs would have to give way to one of belt-tightening, and we believe those in the state college system who consider the present situation a passing one during which the taxpayers can be asked to support them in some sort of status quo are engaging in wishful thinking. There are too many other unmet public needs crying for attention.

One of the major reasons for generous public support of higher education in the 1960's was the realization that the youngsters born during the post World War II baby boom were already in the nation's elementary and secondary schools and would inevitably hit U.S. colleges and universities like a deluge. And the flood did come. But of the factors that have led to a tapering off in those enrollments in recent years, only one --the immediate economic concerns of parents and students stemming from the 1970-71 recession--seems likely to change. The soft job market in many types of work requiring a college degree and the resulting upsurge of interest in vocational education do not appear to be passing phenomena. Neither does the growing conviction that not everyone can necessarily benefit from a college education. And the persistent decline in the nation's birth rate is now being felt in teacher cutbacks in the elementary schools-- a factor that should influence planning for higher education needs for at least several decades.

There may be some justification for the State Legislature to use a moderate, scalpel-like approach rather than swinging a hatchet in making cutbacks in state college faculty ranks during the coming biennium while such experiments as the "broader campus" concept are given a trial. But it would be economic foolishness not to begin the trimming process now in view of consistently declining enrollments and the apparent trends of the future.

Mankato Free Press December 11, 1972

State College Has Basic Recruiting Disadvantages

One of the reasons why state colleges face enrollment problems is, quite simply stated, severe competition from 18 junior colleges and 30 vocational-technical institutes; and a $500-a-head bounty paid private colleges, as authorized by the 1971 legislature.

The education bubble has burst, and previous long-range forecasts of ever-increasing enrollments at all levels of education have not panned out.

The state has unwittingly laid the ground within the post-secondary structures of education statewide, for an intra-family scramble over numbers and priorities. Worse, for reasons which seemed to make perfectly good sense at one time, some institutions have been armed with more persuasive offensive power.

Take for example, the vocational-technical institutes--30 of them--which compete for students from the advantageous ground of low or no cost.

-- A high school graduate under 21 pays no tuition for courses at a voc-tech institute.

-- By contrast, for three quarters of full-time instruction, he would pay $1,425 at the University of Minnesota, if a commuter (all voc-tech students are), $600 for tuition and fees at a state college or junior college. Some courses offered by voc-tech institutes, if not exactly identical to those offered by the technical colleges at Waseca and Crookston, the junior colleges and the state colleges, are in some instances highly similar, overlapping or parellel.

Faced with no strong, personal academic motivation, a student may very well opt the cost over breadth of offerings. It's that easy a decision on his part, and certainly not to be condemned, especially during a period of economic uncertainty. But his judgement multiplied many times over may very well help to account in part for declines in enrollment now borne by the state colleges and junior colleges.

It is grossly unjust that the state colleges not only have to face deleterious, nationwide enrollment trends in their fight to preserve whatever they have gained in the way of quality during the boom years, but that they also have to cope with in-system competitive undermining at the lower undergraduate level. Some investigation into this problem by the Higher Education Coordinating Council (HECC) is already underway, and one can be pretty sure that HECC's "impact study" will yield some fairly obvious conclusions about the inbred and growlingly savage, recruiting problems which will be the eventual common and shared fate of all institutions in the state.

Something should be done to ameliorate this condition, and the only way possibly, without duplicating past errors of hastily enriching one educational organ at the drastic expense of another, is to level costs off on an equitable basis. In this way a student's choice will not be based on the fleeting perception of cost alone, but on more lasting vocational considerations.

The legislature had every good intention when it enacted a program of aid to private colleges in the state. But the result of giving every private college $500 for each new enrollee--and each private junior college $400, in a like manner--means that private colleges can negotiate for a prospective in-state applicant from a position of advantage on a relative-cost basis which can make it as inexpensive to attend Carleton, let us say, as MSC.

With $500 guaranteed Carleton for each new enrollee, it can be seen where a state college might be at a serious recruiting disadvantage.

The rationale behind the legislature's move to establish a state-aid program to private colleges was based on the assumption that private colleges assumed a burden of educating state residents at little future construction or instructional cost to the state. But there is no longer a need for expanded services.

Measure that fact against the state's central responsibility of furnishing inexpensive higher education to its high school graduates, and one can see that shoring up private colleges has worked detrimentally against the ideals of public higher education in Minnesota.

Faculty Urged To Pass The Word, Aid In Recruitment

A request for faculty teamwork in an effort to get timely information to prospective students has come from the college's financial aids office. There is concern that many high school seniors are not aware that they have only until February 1 to apply for some 5,000 scholarships and grants expected to be awarded this year by the State of Minnesota.

Although the exact amount of money and number of scholarships and grants available have not yet been determined by the 1973 Minnesota Legislature, applications for these aids still must be submitted by Feb. 1 to the Higher Education Coordinating Commission (HECC). "During a time when enrollment is down, we need teamwork by the faculty and administration to make sure prospective students are aware that this money is available," said Erwin Templin, assistant director of financial aids.

x x x x x

A year ago last fall 88 entering freshmen at St. Cloud got $51,975 in scholarships and grants through the state program. By last fall, this had jumped to 215 freshmen getting a total of $113,925. But the 155 who received grants and the 60 who got state scholarships in 1972 represent a small percentage of the total number eligible. Of the 1,538 entering freshmen at St. Cloud last September, 1,493 were from Minnesota.

Initial awards state-wide last year totaled $2.7 million. But despite the funds available, fewer new college students than expected applied, Templin said. Consequently, more applicants for initial state aid got help--an average of $530 to each recipient at St. Cloud.

The grant-in-aid and scholarship program is what Templin calls "revenue sharing, Minnesota style." It is designed to provide financial aid to those state residents qualified for higher education but who lack financial resources to attend college.

And now, more grants are being awarded to students from middle-income families, according to B.J. Kersteter, student aids officer for HECC. Many students from middle-income families can qualify for financial aid with state money when they could not in federally-supported programs, Templin said.

High school seniors planning to attend one of the 135 eligible Minnesota post-secondary educational institutions and compete for a state scholarship must complete the Minnesota Scholastic Aptitude Test (MSAT) and the Parents' Confidential Statement (PCS) and file a scholarship and grant application available from their high school counselors, Templin said.

High school rank and an MSAT score are used to help determine who will get scholarships, which range from $100 to $1,000 each. Awards are based on student need as shown in a PCS required of all applicants. Need, not academic ability, is used to determine who will receive grants, although the applicant must be eligible for admission to the institution he chooses. Grants range from $100 to $1,000.

Kersteter urges that all high school seniors apply for aid. Because HECC has requested a "considerable increase" in funds from the legislature, "prospects appear excellent for receiving aid if students can demonstrate need," he said.

Last year, initial monetary awards went to 4,109--or 45 per cent--of the 8,900 applicants, HECC reports. But since failure to complete and file a Parents' Confidential Statement caused 2,600 applications to be withdrawn, 65 per cent of those who filed complete applications got monetary awards.

"During a time when we seem to have to sell post-secondary education, we think that getting this financial aids information to prospective students is an excellent challenge for faculty and administration," Templin said.

Dr. Irvamae Applegate Dies Saturday In St. Cloud Hospital

Dr. Irvamae Applegate, 52, dean of the School of Education, died Saturday evening, March 3, in the St. Cloud Hospital. She had been hospitalized since late December. The Benson Funeral Home is handling the funeral arrangements.

Services will be conducted at 2 p.m. Wednesday (March 7) at the First United Methodist Church in St. Cloud. Instead of flowers, the family prefers memorials to the Dr. Irvamae Applegate Student Loan Fund.

Visitation will be Monday (March 5) evening at the Hanson Funeral Home in Princeton and Tuesday (March 6) afternoon and evening at the Benson Funeral Home. Dr. Applegate is survived by her husband, Dwain, of Rt. 2, Sauk Rapids.

* * * * *

Dr. Applegate came to St. Cloud State as a supervisor of student teachers in 1956. She became associate dean for teacher education and head of the Division of Education in 1961. The next year she became dean of the School of Education.

She held a B.S. degree from North Dakota State University and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Minnesota. She taught at Cass Lake and Hazen, N.D., before moving to Princeton, Minn., where she spent nine years as a teacher, a guidance director and then junior high school principal until coming to St. Cloud.

Her climb to national prominence in education began in Princeton as organizer and president of the local education association. In 1960 she became president of the Central Minnesota Education Association and in 1963 she was elected president of the Minnesota Education Association. During her 1966-67 term as National Education Association president that group's membership passed the one-million mark.

She received an honorary doctor of science degree from North Dakota State University in 1963 for outstanding educational leadership. In 1967 she received the NEA's H. Council Trenholm Award for service to education in the areas of civil and human rights.

Dr. Applegate was re-elected in 1971 to her second two-year term as a representative to the executive committee of the World Confederation of Organizations of the Teacher Profession, an international group of representatives of teacher organizations in 66 nations. Last January, she was elected to a one-year term on the board of directors of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

Her work in education has been recognized in many ways. She has been listed in Who's Who in America, Who's Who of American Women, Who's Who in American Education and, most recently, in the 1971 edition of Outstanding Educators of America and in the 1972 edition of Two Thousand Women of Achievement.

* * * * *

President Charles J. Graham issued the following statement Saturday:

"The death of Irvamae Applegate is a deep personal loss to her friends and associates. It will be an abiding loss to education in general and St. Cloud State College in particular.

"Dean Applegate was totally dedicated to improving lives, individually and collectively, through education. As a teacher and an administrator she continually pursued that goal, playing a significant role in the advancement of education on this campus, in this state, throughout the nation, and in other parts of the world.

"During her remarkable career she was influential in major developments affecting large organizations. Yet she never lost the personal touch characteristic of greatness. We will miss her keen mind, her quick wit and her driving zeal. We are mindful that in exhausting her own life she renewed the lives of many others.

Because of people like Irvamae Applegate, St. Cloud State College has a proud heritage of excellence. She has left her influence here, and it will endure."

March 1973

From the President's Desk:

If you think a college campus is active during the academic year but dull in the summertime, St. Cloud State College's 1973 summer schedule can change your mind. Supplementing the college's regular course offerings in all departments this summer will be a wide variety of workshops, institutes, programs and tours designed for people of all ages interested in learning more about themselves and the world around them.

Here is just a sampling of the summer workshops available: Aviation-Aerospace, East Asian Studies, Mass Media, Computer Programming, Economic Education, Alcohol and Traffic Safety, Motorcycles and Recreational Vehicles, Film and Audio Experimentation, Outdoor Education, and Children's Literature. In addition, two educational tours for college credit are planned.

Among the experimental courses to be taught are: "Aerobics for Men and Women," "Advanced Practices in Creative Writing," "History of Women," "Rhetoric of the Women's Movement and Counter-Movements," and "Intercultural and International Perspectives for the Teacher." Some courses will put special emphasis on human relations in various institutional settings.

Those who enjoy the fine arts will be attracted by our summer theatre program at Theatre L'Homme Dieu and our summer art colony at Studio L'Homme Dieu, both located in the beautiful resort country near Alexandria.

Participating in St. Cloud's summer program can be a family affair incorporated into a summer vacation or planned around a summer vacation. Many workshops are scheduled for only one or two weeks. Those who choose to enroll for a full five-week session have a choice: June 11 to July 13 or July 16 to August 17.

The St. Cloud campus is lovely during the summer months. All the new buildings are air conditioned. People of all ages are enrolled. Student-faculty relationships are friendly and casual. There is ample parking space. And within a short distance of the campus are many recreational lakes and parks.

If you would like more information about St. Cloud's summer program, you may obtain a copy of the Summer Bulletin by writing to the Director of Admissions. After you have considered the possibilities, perhaps you will join those who have already discovered that summertime is an ideal time to further their education.

Sincerely,

Charles J. Graham

STUDENTS RENEW INTEREST IN ON-CAMPUS LIVING

The disenchantment with on-campus living that closed residence hall at St. Cloud State a year ago is on its way out.

About 98 per cent of the college's residence hall rooms are filled this quarter, and the reason, says program director Douglas Busch, is "the personal touch."

A new residence hall program has had the most effect in Holes and Stearns Halls, which house 800 freshmen. Faculty advisers, counselors, classes, tutors and a more open, attractive and positive atmosphere have come to the hall.

The goal is to provide a year-round orientation program that

SCS STUDENTS ARE OFFERED THREE NEW MONEY SOURCES

St. Cloud State has been awarded $36,400 for scholarship undergraduates during the 1973-74 school year. The amount St. Cloud's share of a $147,000 grant to the State College System from the Charles and Ellora Alliss Educational Foundation of St. Paul.

The awards were made to the colleges on the basis of enrollment. Scholarships will be granted according to the student needs, at the discretion of the college.

Myrl Carlsen, who retired in 1963 after 37 years in the college's music department, has established a scholarship to give each year to a vocal music student.

She is the first person in the history of the college's Alumni Association to establish a perpetual endowment scholarship while still living, according to Alumni Director Richard Kisch.

The music department will screen applicants each spring and select a recipient on the basis of academic performance and financial need.

St. Cloud State History Professor Calvin Gower and wife have set up an award to be given each spring to a graduating senior.

The Elio H. Gower Award, in memory of Gower's mother who died two years ago, will go to an outstanding senior planning to teach English, history or foreign languages. The cash award will be made on the basis of academic performance.

RESPONSE 'OVERWHELMING' TO OVERSEAS STUDY PROGRAM

Almost 300 students turned out in January to find out about a new Overseas Study Program at St. Cloud State.

The program will bring 100 students to Fredericia, Denmark, next September for a year. Courses and faculty members will go with the students.

What sets St. Cloud's overseas study program apart from others are its cost and its "honesty," said Dr. Robert Frost, director of public service careers and program development at St. Cloud and coordinator of the overseas project.

Room and board, tuition, fees and transportation come to about $2,000, approximately what it would cost the on-campus students. Other overseas programs, Frost said, are idealistic and costly to the point of excluding most students.

"Because we're a state college, ours is a very honest program and our first effort is to make the program available to all students," Frost said.

The Overseas Study Center provides classrooms, faculty offices,

While in Fredericia, a city of 16 college credits each quarter.

Courses will be selected from the basis of students interest, depth and course material that would give a student a European environment, Frost said.

Independent study, special projects and courses are available. Next November students will study in the Soviet Union as work.

To prepare for the year, part-time courses this spring for a cultural study in Denmark.

FINANCIAL AIDS SOURCES IN PERIOD OF CHANGE

Federal aid to St. Cloud students through the Work Study program, National Direct Student Loans, Equal Opportunity Grants (EOG) and federally insured loans should total about $1.65 million during the current fiscal year, or about $550,000 more than a year ago, according to financial aids director Milford Johnson.

But there are changes in the financial aids program planned for 1973-74 that will, among other things, replace the EOG program with Basic Opportunity Grants.

The new program will give each college-age student up to $1,400 to attend a post-secondary school. But there are stipulations that will restrict many students from getting the full amount, Johnson said.

It may be as late as June before the college knows just what and how much money is available. In the meantime, the financial aids office is processing applications to the point of determining how much of a need a student has. Final awards will be made as soon as the total amount available is announced.

Johnson said that all students and prospective students should apply for financial aids, even if they feel they do not qualify for a grant. There are other kinds of aids available, including an expanding scholarship program, he said.

The college has doubled the number of scholarships it will award to junior college students transferring to St. Cloud for the 1973-74 school year.

There are 48 scholarships of $300 each and 48 of $150 each available—enough to help about one out of every five transfer students.

Any junior college student with a grade point average of 2.5 or above may apply. No statement of financial need is required, but the deadline for applying is May 1. Recipients will be notified by May 15.

Nine foreign students from five countries received scholarships winter quarter from funds generated during the inauguration of President Charles Graham last March.

The Inaugural Steering Committee decided to use the $1,935 balance, after inaugural expenses were paid, to provide the scholarships after it discovered that no other funds were available to aid foreign students this year.

MAYOR LOEHR, PRESIDENT GRAHAM INVITE EUROPEANS TO ST. CLOUD

Between 100 and 180 Europeans will be given a chance to learn first-hand about American government, family life, civic organizations and schools through a new program at St. Cloud State.

Alcuin Loehr, the city's mayor, and college president Charles Graham have invited students and other Europeans to spend three months in St. Cloud next fall and become a part of the academic and urban communities.

While enrolled at the college, the visitors will be encouraged to observe the workings of city government, participate in activities at the hospital and visit area homes, schools, orphanages and the reformatory.

Each European will spend at least one of the three months of his stay living with an American family in St. Cloud.

Dr. Robert Frost, director of public service careers and program development at St. Cloud, is coordinator of the program.

ST. CLOUD STATE TO HOST 1973 MAY BOWLE

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS PLACES RECORD NUMBER OF INTERNS

A record 32 students were employed with 23 businesses and governmental agencies winter quarter as participants in the School of Business Internship Program.

The program, which has been averaging 15 interns per quarter, had 23 accounting, three management/finance and six marketing/general business interns working with firms in St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Cloud, Richfield and New Ulm.

Interns usually work full-time, are paid a salary and earn 16 credits. The program is designed to give the interns, all seniors in the School of Business, experience in actual job situations and a chance to evaluate career possibilities.

BIOLOGY STUDENTS SAMPLE STEARNS COUNTY WELL WATER

Twenty-two St. Cloud State biology students have spent three months surveying and testing in a random sample of 117 wells in Stearns County.

The students, seniors and graduate students, were enrolled in Dr. Keith Knutson's Water and Sewage Microbiology course.

They took from two to six water samples of each of the 37 townships in Stearns County, interviewed the well owners and tested the samples for the presence of coliform bacteria and excessive nitrogen.

The interviews were to find out the depth of each well, the distance between the well and the septic tank and the type of well.

The survey revealed that drinking water in about 11 per cent of the wells appears contaminated. Owners of almost half of the wells do not know such basic facts as the depth of their wells or the distance between their well and their septic tank.

Respondents provided data on their characteristics, evaluated the desirable and undesirable characteristics of the river, evaluated the role of media in providing them with environmental information, expressed attitudes towards the use of the river and how river pollution should be controlled and financed, and provided data on what aspects of their life styles they were and were not willing to change to improve environmental quality. According to the report, "Two significant findings were that Minnesotans do not desire to curtail their uses of energy to improve environmental quality, and the perceived present uses of the River are exactly opposite to the uses the public desires."
